

Milking Gloves

DeLaval Milking Gloves

All people working in the dairy should consider using milking gloves during milking for the following reasons;

- To maintain condition of your hands. Avoid unsightly cracks and cuts on your hands.
- To prevent the spread of mastitis causing bacteria from one cow to another. Hands are like teat skin – the more crevices, the more places bacteria have to hide from the sanitation process, (hand washing). Wearing gloves reduces the risk of transferring these bacteria from your hands to the cow.
- To prevent you from contracting an infection or disease from the cow, like leptospirosis. Bacteria can enter your body through cracks and cuts in skin or from chewing dirty fingernails.

Gloves are cheap and disposable. Throw away the glove and you throw away the bacteria and muck on them.
